

She was not at home. The blinds carefully drawn would indicate that the house was deserted when the two callers stepped from the landau and approached the door. It is not the custom of callers to scrutinize blinds with care when making a round call, and on this occasion no slightest motion was noted beside the edge of the blinds up stairs. When all was safely over and the slight sound of had died away, she rushed to the telephone and called up a friend.

"Hello dear, Mrs. Blank and Mrs. Dash were just here to call, and they did look so stunning in their new spring suits." More followed going into particulars as to the fetching costumes of each, even down to the kind of shoes worn. The next day the same two ladies made a call at the home of the friend in question, and in the conversation on clothes she innocently remarked that Mrs. Smith had told her how especially well they were looking the day before when they made a call on her. A look of mystery darkened each face which as relieved a moment later as one of the callers blandly remarked, "Why, we found her out."

Few of her friends will ever know how nearly the match was pulled off, as the sporting man puts it. The train drew into the station at Farmington, and gently but firmly the would-be groom endeavored to have the fair one descend on the further side while the aggregation left the train by the excursion route. His eyes were turned toward the supposed object of his passion, but she demurred. It made the trial doubly hard for him as she was wearing a sweeping automobile veil which he thought was too bewitching to waste. The end is not yet.

Friends in this city have received cards for the marriage of Miss Louise Addison Hughes, daughter of Andrew Swearingen Hughes, of Denver, to Peter Randolph Morris, which takes place Saturday, July 14 at five o'clock in St. John's Chapter House in Denver. The announcement of the engagement of the young people was made in these columns some few weeks ago. Mr. Morris is with the Salt Lake Route and has headquarters just now in Los Angeles. Miss Hughes is a leader in Denver society.

Two of the really clever girls of the town entertained during the day at a rather original party where all the guests were young again. That is to say all of them were clothing of the youthful order, and needless to say there was no necessity for formal entertainment. One little girl whose stature is diminutive enough for the part was a five-year-old apparently with her curls and her big doll.

The light showery of the afternoon dampened the enthusiasm at the Country club yesterday, and partially owing to this and partially to attractions elsewhere the attendance was light.

Miss Henriette Crozman is to be the guest of honor at several affairs during her stay in this city. Mrs. Harold Russell has plans for her entertainment, but they will be arranged to suit the convenience of Miss Crozman.
